

The MHM program is creating graduates who are becoming leaders in their respective communities

Leigh Sowerby (Cohort 2012) published a research article in The Laryngoscope about the lack of awareness of surgeons of the cost of surgical consumables. This paper, in part, comes from an assignment he completed in the Health Management Foundations II course. Leigh presented the poster on this topic at the Canadian Agency for Drugs and Technology in Health in Saskatchewan in April 2015. This same topic was podcast by the National Post in July.¹

In the May/June 2015 edition of the American Academy of Ambulatory Care Nursing Viewpoint Newsletter, Denyse Henry (Cohort 2012) was in the spotlight for being a leader in her workplace, Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre and in the Canadian Association of Ambulatory Care.²

The Canadian Association of Medical Radiation Technologist (CAMRT) profiled Komal Mazhar (Cohort 2012) in their summer 2015 newsletter. The article, Striking a Balance, highlights her full-time work at an independent health facility, her role as a MHM student, her volunteer work with Ontario Association of Medical Radiation Sciences and CAMRT, and her entrepreneurial venture. Her motto is "Perseverance Commands Success."

¹ <https://www.linkedin.com/lite/external-redirect?url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww%2Enationalpost%2Ecom%2Fm%2Fwp%2Fblog%2Ehtml%3Fb%3Dnews%2Enationalpost%2Ecom%2F%2Fnews%2Fcanada%2Fshowing-surgeons-massive-cost-of-disposable-supplies-leads-to-big-savings-for-hospitals&urlHash=RJgZ>

² http://www.canadianambulatorycare.com/uploads/1/0/4/5/10454196/aaacn_spotlight.pdf

Dr. Leigh Sowerby
Photo courtesy National Post

Denyse Henry

Komal Mazhar